"The Sociality of Stones: Toward a Feminist Metaphysics"

6.10.2009, 16-18

U40 Sali 8 (Unioninkatu 40, Metsätalo)

Naomi Scheman is a Professor of Philosophy and of Gender, Women’s, & Sexuality Studies at the University of Minnesota and a guest researcher at the Umea Center for Gender Studies. She published a volume of her collected papers, Engenderings: Constructions of Knowledge, Authority, & Privilege, in 1993, and is preparing a second volume for Oxford University Press entitled Shifting Ground: Knowledge & Reality, Transgression & Trustworthiness. Her talk will address the current interest, in feminist theory and elsewhere, in rethinking materiality. She will focus in particular on why feminists might care about the rather abstract ontological question of what it is to be a thing, such as a stone.

The lecture is part of Christina Research Seminar
