

Pierre-Jean Bordahandy Short CV

Pierre-Jean Bordahandy recently moved from the University of Adelaide where he was teaching contract law, comparative law and international export trade and transport law to the University of South Australia where he teaches Contract Law and Introduction to Australian Law. He holds a diploma in criminal sciences, a D.E.S.S. (French L.L.M.) in Maritime and Transport Law (University of Aix-en-Provence), and a L.L.M. in Private International Law and comparative law (University of Stockholm).

Pierre-Jean has written a master thesis on the legal status of Off-shore rigs and a master thesis on the duty to provide cargo under a voyage charter-party.

In 2007 Pierre-Jean completed his PhD in Maritime Law on “the concept of container and its legal implications” under a joint supervision and double degree scheme between the University of Queensland (Maritime and Shipping Law Unit) and the University of Aix-en-Provence (Centre de Droit Maritime et des Transports).

Pierre-Jean has worked in France for a couple of years as an in house lawyer for a company involved in the international trade of flat glass (cargo claim, insurance policies, charter parties etc.). He has also worked in Australia for Gadens Lawyers and occasionally for Blake Dawson and Waldron advising on French law regarding mining related matters in New Caledonia.
