

Anna Kajander, University of Helsinki

Books, readers and digitalisation

Digitalisation continuously affects the cultural sphere that is often referred to as book culture. The printed book and its long cultural history have created reading traditions that have been very similar for decades. Now, however, digitalisation is changing reading habits and the ways concept(s) of a book is understood. In the presentation, I will discuss the Finnish reader's attitudes and experiences on the technological and cultural changes of reading.